

These ceramic replicas are based on mini plastic finds discovered on a Japanese beach. Colourful pieces of waste polished by the sea, shifting with the tide among lifeless corals and hermit crabs. They once served a function and were apart of something bigger. But now stand alone as one-of-a-kind pieces.

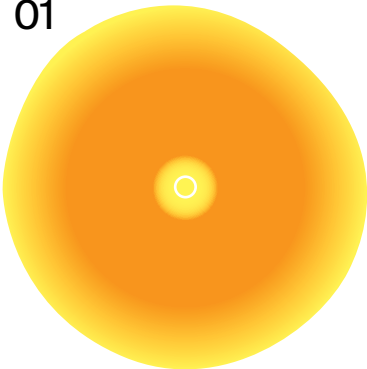

Merijn Haenen's works are an invitation to explore shape, material, and color. He encourages viewers to pick up his works and examine them closely, sparking curiosity and inviting engagement.
